

Top Reasons to Let Nurses Focus on Patient Care, Not Inventories

Nurses are one of the most overworked professionals, sacrificing their days and nights to care for patients. Unfortunately, they are also being pulled away for non-nursing related responsibilities on the floor such as complicated inventory management processes.

Keeping them focused on patient care, not inventories, can:

Decrease procedural errors and clinical errors

Increase the overall productivity

Clinical mistakes can be cut almost in half when there are less than 3 interruptions during procedures

Retain nurses and reduce mandatory overtime caused by non-nursing tasks

Avoid unprecedented costs and lawsuits for hospitals or clinics due to patient safety

Appropriate outsourcing of certain responsibilities can take the burden off nurses without losing support. Their passion is to care for the weak and heal the sick, and our passion is efficient, accurate, and reliable inventories.

Together, we can help nurses with faster, safer, and more efficient procedures. To learn more, please visit rgis.com/healthcare

"Study: Distracted Nurses Make More Errors" <http://www.asrn.org/journal-nursing/761-study-distracted-nurses-make-more-errors.html>
"10 Reasons Why Nurses Want to Leave Hospitals" <https://creativenurse.com/nurses-leaving-hospitals/>